Story 1

Clarry is a cute, fluffy Bernese Mountain Dog puppy with a snub black nose and two big, loving eyes. One of the puppy's favourite activities is romping around in meadows and chasing butterflies.

One day, Clarry saw something shiny on the ground. A shiny coin! «What's that?» he asked aloud. A friendly elderly lady who was just passing by smiled and said, «That's a franc, my dear puppy. You can make wishes with it!»

Clarry was thrilled. He loved making wishes come true! His dream was a super-cool red ball. He wanted to run out and buy one right away. But how was he going to keep the coin safe? His big paws weren't very good for that.

Then he met a boy named Noah. Noah had his piggy bank with him. «Why don't you put your coin in a piggy bank? That way, it will be safe, and you can collect lots more coins. That's called saving.»

«Saving? That's a great idea! But I don't have a piggy bank,» said Clarry. Noah thought for a moment. «I have an idea!» he exclaimed excitedly. He ran off and returned shortly afterwards with a small, empty barrel that could be worn around the neck on a strap.

«A real savings barrel for a real St. Bernard!» said Noah. «Now you'll always have your savings with you.» Clarry wagged his tail excitedly. Noah carefully took the shiny coin and let it disappear into Clarry's barrel with a soft «clanq!»

From then on, Clarry always carried his savings barrel around his neck. Every time he found a coin, he knew exactly what to do. He thought of his red ball and looked forward to the day when he would have collected enough coins to buy it.

Because Clarry had learned: Saving is like collecting treasures. It takes a little patience, but in the end, the dream comes true!
